Two cent letter postage will become a law before congress a ljourus.

A telegram has been sent from Madison to the Milwaukee Republican Sentinel which states that both Governor Rusk and Secretary of State Timme are under the impression that the coming session of the legislature will be brief, as they ean conceive of nothing arising which will necessitate extended legislation. Last winter the session was protracted on account of the labor of redistering the state and the consideration of numerous city charters, which were hastened before the legisature by the different villages, under the bolief that the session was the last under the annual system. The redistricting is finished, few applications for charters are anticipated, and no other matters of importance, so far as known, are expected to come up, hence the reason for the belief that the session will be short, probably not extending over a period of more than two months.

There is certainly a clashing of interest in regard to the tariff which will put congress and the parties in a strange position. There is a general demand-audiwhat we mean by that is, that from both parties and from all parts of the north, west and east-that the duly on sugar should either be greatly reduced or taken off entirely. The south would prefer to keep the duty on that article, but in other parts of the country the opinion prevails that sugar should be admitted free. But the late grange convention of this state adopted a resolution favoring a retention of the duty on sugar. Why was this? Simply because the farmers of Wisconsin are experimenting with amber cane, and they want sugar protected. This confliet of interests will make it exceedingly difficult for congress to frame a tariff scheduld that will suit all the interests of this country.

That misgvided young man, William Stafford, who is trying to make a tragedian of himself, is not meeting with success. Ho gets poor houses, and not very flattering press comments. He tried to -play in Rockford after he left Janesville, and here is what the Grzette of that city says about him:

Last evening, by actual count, there were fifty-eight persons in the parquette and dress circle, including ushers and newspaper men, and twenty-five persons up stairs, at the opera house, who lind assembled to hear the William Stafford company play "Marble Heart." The actors took their parts as anybody world under the circumstances, in a sort of reckless way. The manager informed us that the audience was smrller than at any previous entertainment by the company. But he added, we are not playing for the pecuniary benefits, we are trying to establish a reputation for Mr. Stafford.

Mr. Stafford has a rich father, and the son being stage struck, the old gentleman s spending a handsome little fortune in he attempt to make a tragedian of him. So far, the money has been thrown away. A reputation is not so easily established

Some one who didn't understand his business, sent a dispatch from Milwaukee to one of the Chicago papers about John F. Petter dying at a poor house in Waukesha county. Not to be out-done in this business, the St. Paul Globe published this to the country:

John F. Potter, notorious in antebellum days as the only man in congress who succeeded in bluffing a southern tire-eater, and became widely known in consequence as "Bowie-knife Potter," contributed as largely as any other man in the state toward the upholding of the republican party, has just died in the Waukesha county poor house, neglected by all who for years were suitors for his favor and juliaence.

John F. Potter doesn't live in Wankesha county, and has never been taken to the poor house. He owns a good farm near East Troy, Walworth county, and his son owns a large one adjoining. Mr. Mr. Potter is as comfortably fixed, financially, as needs be, having an abundance of this world's goods, at least more than he can use during his lifetime. Only a short time ago, he purchased a small tract of land from a neighbor, and prid $1,500 for it, cash down, just to accommodate his friend, who needed the money and did not care for the land. Mr. Potter did dot need the land, but having no particular use for the money, thus befriended his neighbor.

MILWAUKER, Wis., Dec. 18.-The return of Superintendent Whitehead from Nebraska, and his report of the results of his search for Maggie Honnecke, destroy all hopes of finding any real clow in that state to the myslery surrounding the missing girl's disappearance. He says he missing girls disappearance. Ho says he thinks that Erown, the main who followed the alleged abductors and caused their arrest, was a geatheman in every sease of the word, and was perfectly sincere in his intentions. Mg. Whitehead further expressed it as his firm conviction that Maggue Hennecke was never in Nebraska. He had seen Borden, the alleged detective Hamilton, one of the alleged abductors, who was arrated but subsequently released, and Dr. McEwen and Beck, for whom requisition papers have repeatedly bren asked. "In fact," he said, "I have seen every one commeted with this Nebraska phase of the Hennecke affair, but I will positively say nothing more than what you have mentioned about Brown, and you might give it as my opinion that I don't hink the poor git was ever taken to Nebraska." Whatever the connection of Borden, Boland, Bock and McEwen with the mysterious disappearance of Maggue Hennecke may have been or is, it can be inferred from Mr. Whitehead's remarks that the girl, if abducted at all, was not taken to Nebraska. thinks that Brown, the man who followed the

A SAD STORY.

Return of Little Annie Jackson with Tired Face and a Pitiful Tale.

Deserted by Her Medical Admirer She Makes a Solitary Trip to St. Louis.

A Cruel Story of Masculine Deprayity and Girlish Affection.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Annie Loftus Jackson was cleared up last night, when the wanderer returned and fold a story which proves beyond doubt that she was lured from her home by George C. Buddington, the medical student. Together the couple went to a hotel, and the young medical student, in spite of his donials, will now be confronted with the victim of his wiles.

Late Saturday evening the young girl returned to her homo. She appeared dazed, and seemed afraid that some one intended to do her bodily harm. All efforts to calm her were useless, and a short time later, when her mother, who had been summoned from the Harrison Street station rushed into the room, the girl indulged in an outburst of griof that no one present witnessed with dry eyes.

"Annie, my darling," sobbed the mother, and sank into a swoon.

Annie, terrified beyond expression, throw horself passionately upon the floor by her mother's side, and thus the father and husband found them as he entered the room a moment later. A neighbor who had been dispatched for medical aid soon returned with Dr. Taylor, who succeeded in restoring Mrs. Jackson to consciousness. All save the members son to consciousness. All save the members of the family withdrew, and for an hour the child remained clasped in her mother's arms. Thus is the story she fells:

"When I left my sister last Monday I went down to the college to see George Buddington. He had professed to think a great deal of me, and had invited me to come and soo him. I went to his boarding-house when I found he was not at the college, and he agreed to meet me later in the day, and so I kept an appointment with him at 5 o'clocit. I knew I did wrong. When we left the college together we walked down Cettage Grove avenue to Twenty-second street, I think it was, where George went into a telegraph office and sent a dispatch."

"To whom?"

"To whom?"

"To whom?"

"To whom?"

"To whom?"

"To whom the informed them that he would not be home until to-morrow. That is what he told me. Then he took a car and went down the street, and he took me to a hotel, the Clarence house. He registered as McDay, and respresented that I was his sister."

It is now apparent that the diseatch which McDay, and respresented that I was his sister."

It is now apparent that the dispatch which was sent to Buddington was written by himself. He dated it at No. 22 East Sixtenih street, and signed "McDay." His purpose was, evidently, to leave the impression on the minds of the landlady and her daughter that he was detained on professional business.

The girl continued: "He got two rooms, and he came right into my room and sad he was going to stay there all night. I told him he shouldn't do any such thing. He said ho would, that he had made arrangements to stay all night and he should certainly do so. I told him he had no should certainly do so. I told him he had no business to talk that way to me, and he said he would stay there all night. Then he went to the door, locked it, and put the key in his pocket, and I began to be afraid. He took hold of me, and I fought and screamed. Then he said he would order some support for me, and he went away. I think it was about 8 o'clock. The suppers wore sent up, but he did not come back, and after I had waited a long time I sout him a disputch to his boarding-house, asking him to come for me immediately, as I wanted to go home. He back of it that he could not come; that he was afraid to go home alone, and I staid there all wight. me immediately, as I wanted to go home. Ho took the dispatch I sent him and wrote on the back of it that he could not come; that he was kept away on a case of continement. I was afraid to go home alone, and I staid there all night. I thought he would come the next day, but he didn't, and the next day they began to have suspicious of me at the hotel, and when they usaded about me I told them that I was waiting for my brother. He didn't come and they took an interest in me and asked me where I hved. I told them I lived in St. Louis. That was a wrong story. Then they were all very kind to me, and they raised enough money to take me to St. Louis. I didn't dare to back out, for I thought they would know I had told them a story. O, I forgot to tell you that Wedneaday I got a dispatch from Buddington saying he would come and take me away. When I got to St. Louis I didn't know anybody, and I wandered around and finally went to a good tady's house. Her name is alire, Strauss. Why, she talked to me real kind, just like a mother; but I had told her a story to commence with, and I had told her a story to commence with, and I had to keep it up. Then I went out and met two real kind gentlemen. One of them was named Galvin and the other's name was Beck. They sent me to a police station and got the officers to look out for me. The officers didn't believe the story I fold them. I said my father and mother fived in Canada, and that I had a brother in Chicago who was a medical student. They said they would find out whether I was telling them a story or not, and they had me write a letter to my brother in this city, and I did so."

"What did you say in the leitera?"

"Well, I caffod him 'dear George,' and said the police in St. Louis didn't believe me. I told him I had to show the letter I wrote to the police beforg sinding, and in it I asked him to send me a pass so I could get home."

The lotter to which Annie alluded reached Buddington last night. Below is a copy of it: "St. Louis Thursday, Dec. 15.—Dean Goorge, I would not wri olame them, for it does seem strange. How is all the girls. Do you expect to come home Christians? If you do I wish you would stop in St. Louis and call on a Miss Carrie Millor and a Mr. Gattory. Answer Emiodicity, and please make no delay. Ever your affectionate sister,

ALVIRA JACKSON.

"P. S.—Please write to Self Chestunt street, and remember mo to the boys at the college, and girls too."

"The folks in St. Louis were very kind to mo." Annie continued, and one of them Mr. Gattery took me to the train and sent me to Chicago."

Chicago."
"On the train," the girl added, "they took a good deal of interest in me, both the conductor and the trainmen. I get to Chicago this morning about half-past II o'clock, and then I was afraid to go home. I had some money and —..."

was afraid to go homo. I had some money and —"

"Well, when George left me at that hotel Monday night I found, after he had gone away, a dollar bill which he had left under my had. Then the people, when they sent me to St. Lonis, gave me St in moonsy, Yes, I didn't like to go homo, for I know I did very wrong. I thought I would go up on the train, but when I got to Thirty-Inith street I couldn't hear to go to the house, so I kept right on the rain and went through to Pullnian. There I found a young man I know, and he had read that I was missing and offered to take me home, but I told him I would go home. I got of the train at Thirty-fifth street and met a gir! I know, and she came home with ms."

Annie's recital was many times interrupted by tears, and she betrayed frequent symptoms of hysteria. She is an impulsive child, old for her years, and in manner and speech evinces great spir't and determination. Her description of the struggle in the Charence house leads to the conclusion that Buddinglon did not accomplish his vito purpose. She says she could. By didn't seem to mind that, but when she began to scream he changed his mind and talked about supper.

A reporter called upon Buddington in his cell at the armory and acquainted him with the fact that Miss Jackson had finally shown up, and at the same time detailed to him in brief the story which she had to tell concerning herself, and especially that portion of her story in which the proprietor of the Clarence house is interested. Buddington is at horoughly frightened young man, and moreover has been rather severely freated since he has been rather severely freated since he has been in custody. He refused to say anything concerning the case, and referred the reporter to his attorney. But his curiosity rather got the best of his determination not to be inforviewed. He was extremely anxious to know all that Miss Jackson had to say concerning him as well as herself, and the reporter obliged him with as many particulars as possible. Thereupon Buddington asserted that the young lady was a notorious hiar, and that no one knew it better than her father, but he did not specifically dony the Charence house story. He was also anxious to know what Mr. Jacksof thought of the case now, and whether he intended to prosecute, and it appeared from this that the young man thought that he had as good reason to be afraid of the father as he had to be afraid of the ponalty imposed by law. As the interview was about to close, limidington asserted his innoconce of the charge of abduction in the strongest possible terms, and seemed to feel confident that he would come out all right as soon as he was given a hearing.

OPTIONS.

given a hearing,

Mr. Beecher On Corners and Speculation Generally.

New York, Dec. 18.-The Rev. Henry Ward Beccher appeared before the senate committee on grain corners. He said that if any man could buy all the wheat in the country and so starve the people, he would be a criminal of the deepest dye. He thought the species of gumbling carried on by merchants was far less injurious upon the public morals than the effeets produced by church fairs and religious lotteries. He had been, he said, a minister of the gospel for forty-five years. "I hold," ho the gospel for forty-five years. "I noth," he said, "that a man with a long hoad foresces his advantage over his neighbor in these speculations, but on that account these speculations should not be counted inmoval. I regard the age in which we live as an age of combinations. I think it is a part of my profession to deal in futures.—one in realities, the other in risks and chance. A man may sell what does not exist. One, two, or twenty men who looked ahead, wore sufficiently sagacions to phrophecy what would come to pass in the future, and were right in their conjectures, and thereby reap profit. I cannot see that such actions are illegipinate. There is but little danger of famine in this country. If you ask me the gospol side of the subject, you are all wrong from the top to the bottom of society. There is no man who doves his neighbor as himself, but as a mere commercial judgment I do not see exist for any special compaint. Supply and demand are mnor principles which regulate prices. The law of price is the law of brain. The value of the innest silk dress ever made is what fools are willing to pay for it, and that is determined by the vanity of the fool who bids the highest. To a railroad company my place in Packskill might not be worth $10; to me it is worth $10,000. There is nothing in our civilization but what calls for intermediate men. One man makes chairs; another stores them; a railway takes them to a distant city, and there they are sold by another nam. But all this self-simes is wrong, and all commerce is more or less schish. Money-making in Wall street is an illusion. A public assembly can do very little for this. No law can make morelity. I have been much enlightened since this committee has been in session. I have read more about wonderbill and Gould dran they ever read about mo. I think that these investigations are good public instructors. I once hought a manufor of Parama shares, and pail $4 a a share for them. But when I sold them out at $40 a share I was glad to get rid of them. That is all I said, "that a man with a long head foresces his advantage over his neighbor in these Pendleton in Support of His Own Bill; Voorhees Against it.

SENATOR PENDLETON. WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 .- Mr. Pendleton, in support of his bill in the senate, gave some curious instances of the great abuses of the patronage system. said that of 3.400 persons on the rolls of the treasury department 1,500 are not employed by authority of law, and are paid not from any appropriations made by congress, but out of other funds; that 1,700 had been put on the rolls at the pleasure of the secretary of the treasury, and that an army of unauthorized detectives, inspectors, deputies, and agents have been sent over the country at every election. He quoted from the testimony of Mr. Graves, superintendent of the National Bank Rodemption agency, and formerly a civil-service examiner, the following startling state-

"The economy of the proposed system should be clearly brought out. Every one knows that under the present system there is a constant pressure upon the departments to make apcountments, and as a consequence there is a like pressure by the heads of the departments upon their subordinates to devise protexts for taking on new clerks. That state of things was entirely changed under the civil-service rules. Under these rules there could be no pressure in favor of any particular person, and the heads of bureaus and departments did not ask to have the machinery of examinations set in motion unless there was an absolute necessity for the employment of clocks. A considerable amount of money was saved to the treasury during the experiment by the lapsing of the salaries of places which otherwise would inevitably have been filled.

"The extravagance of the present system was well shown in the examination of the bureau of engraving and printing by a committee, of which I was chairman. Of a force of 958 persons, 539, with annual salaries amounting to $330,000, were found to be superfluous and were discharged. The committee reported that for years the force in some branches had been twice and even three times as great as the work required. In one division a sort of platform had been built underneath the iron roof, about seven feet above the floor, to accommodate the surplus counters. It appeared that the room was of ample size without this contrivance for all the persons really needed. In another division were found twenty messengers doing work which it was found could be done by one. The committee reported that the system of patronage was chiefly responsible for the extravagance and irregularities which had marked the administration of the bureau, and declared that it had cost the people millions of dollars in that branch of the service alone. Under this system the office had been made to serve the purpose of an almshouse or In consequence of this report the annual appropriation for the printing bureau was repropriation for the printing bureau was reduced from $500,000 to $200,000, and out of the first year's savings was built the fine building now occupied by that bureau.

He went on to say that another abuse under the present evil sorvice system which this bill sought to correct was the lapsing of salaries or clerks. For instance, where one man was employed by law at a salary of $1,800 per annum three women were sometimes substituted each at a salary of $900 a year. In one instance thirty-five clorks were put on the "lapse roll" in order to show up an amount of money that had otherwise been left over and saved to the government. A senator, whose name he would not mention, but who would recognize the remark, had told him what a certain secretary of one of the departments had said on a similar subject. It was that there were sevention clerks in his department for whom he could find no employment. He said instead of these sevention superfulious clerks he needed one clerk of a higher grade at a good salary. But instead of providing for such a clerk the appropriations have been made otherwise, and the political pressure had been so great that he was compelled to put those seventeen superfulious clerks on the roll.

SENATOR HAWLEY. duced from $500,000 to $200,000, and out of the was compelled to put those seventeon superfluous clerks on the roll.

SENATOR HAWLEY.

Mr. Hawley said something must be done to reform the civil service. The continuance of the present system was rondored impossible, mot only by the evils developed under it, but also by the extraordinary growth of the country and the consequent increase in the number of public offices. Formorly it was not unceasemble to expect that in every bureau of the service the chief should have personal knowledge of the character and ittness of his subordinates, but this could not be expected now, when single departments and offices, like the treasury and the New York custom house, have a greater number of employes than the whole government had in its early days. The old rule was that the power and duly of making removals was vested in the president alone, and it was hetter than the one that had been practiced of fate. The employes of the government knew very well that good conduct and efficiency would give them, at hest, only partial protection, so they were compelled constantly to seek to strengthen their "influonce" until the word has become a stang term among them, and they say to each other: "Who is your influence is out of public life now; I must get some now influence." So, not merely when a now president or a new head of a department comes in, but whenever a new burean chief is appointed, there is a harrying and scarrying among the whole terrified flock to strengthon themselves with additional "influence."
Mr. Hawiy discussed at length the main points of the Pendicton bill. It did not pretend to cover the whole ground of civil service reform, and people should not be too sanguine in their expectations as to its effects; but it was based upon practical experience, and would undoubtedly greatly improve the service. Objection had been made to the commission which the bill proposed to create, but, in his own interest might surfer. President for her action had collect statisties of the progress to the reform. It wa SENATOR HAWLEY.

SENATOR VOORHEES.

Dan Voorhoes, talked his hour and a half in his old familiar way, making Mr. Pondloton and Mr. Bayard feel very theomfortable, for they said: "He is hurting the party." Mr. Pondloton nervously twirled his fingers during the whole of the speech and wore a very ing the whole of the speech and wore a very anxious look. He became restless when Voorhoes turned the battery of his sarcasm upon Pendleton's position and accused him of a disloyal act to the masses of the Domocratic office-seekers who have been a generation out of office. Pendleton had said that the vital forces, manly as well as physical, of public men are spent in seeking office.

Voorhoes denounced Pendleton and the supporters of this bill for such a jeremiad, when they themselves, all their manhood lives, he said, had been persistent seekers after office. "The bill," said Mr. Voorhoes, "proposes a Democratic administration of public admirs with a Republican will annexed." Mr. Voorhoes said the bill provided for admission by competitive examination to only the lowest grade of public offices. Therefore the treatment of the bill in the senate seemed to him to be "much ado about nothing." The zeal of the Republicans for a reform of the civil service seemed to result from death-bed repentance, brought about, not by hatred of their sins, but by fear that they would not be allowed to indulge in them much longer, and the Democrate were soothing the sufferings of the deathbed with the esthetic gruel of politics. Who had ever heard of any political scandals occurring among lower-grade clerks? They were not the public officers who figured in star-route or whisky ring transactions. Yet this bill proposed to examine and regulate and replace these poor minor officials, leaving the strong, arrogant, corrupt higher officials undisturbed. The real demand of the people was for penal laws to punish wrong-doers in high places, not for contrivances to wrong poor clerks. He did not oppose this bill because he desired the offices for Democrats, but for the reason that it practically denied to the Democrats the right to compete for any of the higher offices. He read and commented upon a number of questions which candidates had to answer, he said, without the aid of momoranda, such as: "Name the four largest islands on the globe. Give approximately the latitude of Washington and London. In what direction is Havana, Cuba, from Mississippi and Alabaria, and all the states, and of the year of the process of the measure must take to be introduced to congress, and, supposing it to be vetted, to become a law of the United States." "Bring up your young mon," said Voorhees, "from Mississippi and Alabaria, and all the states, and of the questions was: "Two-thirds of seven-minish of what number is one-half of eight and two-fifths divided by fourteen and seven-tentialess fourteen and truster is one-half of eight and two-fifths divided by fourteen and seven-tentialess fourteen and truster is one-half of eight and two-fifths divided by fourteen and seven-te mission by competitive examination to only the lowest grade of public offices. Therefore the treatment of the bill in the senate seemed ment to the constitution of the United States providing that positinaters, revenue collectors, judges, marshals and United States district attorneys should be elected by the people. He would not be hypocritical about the subject. If the Democratic party should come into power it ought to purify the service by making a thorough and radical change of officeholders, excepting only soldiers who had service.

His Ignorance of the Means of Pre-serving Life in the Arctic Regions.

Carson, Nov., Dec. 18.-The following appears in The Appeal: Senator Jones, who is in

Carson, gives an account of Do Long's Arctic expedition, which he got from Captain Nelbaum in San Francisco. Nelbaum is a Russian, who has been for many years in the service of company, with sleds, dogs, and provisions.

furnished him, at the order of the Maska Furcompany, with sleds, dogs, and provisions. Ho took twenty-seven dogs and one Indian. I account for the loss of the party on the theory that they killed the dogs. I do not believe that De Long knew anything about the undertaking he was grappling with and was ignorant of the means by which progress could be made in that region. I see by the diary that there was but one dog left a few days prior to his death; he must have killed the dogs without knowing their great value, and when the dogs are gone there is absolutely no hope left. The dogs could not have died nor have been lost; they were killed. The seent of these animals is romarkable, and they will detect provisions no matter where they may be. When men in these regions kill polar bears and had more meat than they could keep, they cache the mat, and it sometimes lies in the lee for years, until discovered by dogs. The ice is full of these places. If you need an fudian there, and kill his dog, he lies down and dies. He also neglected to take the right kind of guns. De Long refused the fowling places I offered him, made expressly for the Arctic sons and climate. He said he wanted a gun for hears, not birds, and wouldn't listen to mo. The weight of the Remington rifles hampered him. They took no fishing-lackle, and all their charices for life were thrown away through ignocance. I liked De Long personally, but he was not the near to command an Arctic expedition.

WHITTIER.

Appropriate Celebration of the Seventy-fifth Birthday of the Quaker

Boston, Dec. 18.—Yesterday was the 75th anniversary of John G. Whittion's birth, and the beloved poet received his friends at his winter home in this city. He was the recipient of the congratulations of many personal friends, while the mails brought him scores of kindly good wishes from the foremost leaders in all parts of the literary, world. Mr. Whitlier, while quite feeble in physical frame, seems to lose no white of mental vigor. He entertained pleasantly all who called upon him. He is doing vory little library work at present "Indeed," he remarke l, "I often wish list much I have written was in the Red ees." present "Indood," in remarket, "Forties wish list ninch I have written was in the Red egg." Not, he explained, on account of any sentiments therein expressed, but because much of it, in his opinion, was not worth printing. His time is fully occupied with a voluminous correspondence and in attendance on a brother who lies very sick in East Boston. It is intimated that a more public testineonial will in a few days be tendered him, probably in the shape of a complimentary banquet. Among the tokens of affection sent the poet was a water-color for which he had a number of times expressed his admiration.

Whittier, in eclebrating his birthday anniversary says: "It is rather a queer thing to congratulate a man upon, that he was the years old"—smilingly adding, "perhaps it was something to live so long in this wicked world." Ite thought the New England climate somewhat trying, and quaintiy said: "I am a New England climate. something to five so long in this wirken world." He thought the New England climate somewhat trying, and quaintly said: "I am a New Englander and I love New England. but my seventy-five years living here has fathed to fairly acclimate ine." He says of the amount of literary work he was doing this winter that it was not much; nothing to speak of. "I have done too much already, such as it is. Then I have so many letters to write that I can searcely find time to do much literary work worth the name. There is no man who ought to write much after he is 70, unless, perhaps, it may be Dr. Holmes. He night to write from now until he is 100. There is such wonderful variety in his work that it seems a pity he should ever stop." Mr. Whittier has many tokens from friends in different parts of the country and England.

Engineer Sieg's Herolsm.

Engineer Sieg's Heroism.

The train which left Jersey City on the Pennsylvania Road about 11 o'clock yesterday afternoon was composed of ten passenger cars, containing 620 persons. The smoking-car, which was coupled to the tender, was so much crowded that men stood in the aisle. The train soon began to move swiftly, and when about a mile east of the Hackensack bridge it was going at the rate of forty miles an hour. Suddenly smoke or forty mines an nour. Studenly smoke and fire poured through the front door of the smoking-ear, which was open, and created consternation among the passengers. The roaring flames were swept back from the engine, and they almost hid both it and the tender from sight. "Shut the door, shut the door!" was shouted. The door, shut the door!" sight. "Shut the door, shut the door was shouted. The door was closed, but almost immediately it flew open again, and the engineer and fireman emerged from the fire and smoke and stumbled into the ear. The train dashed on, with no one to govern the engine. Men rushed to the rear platform, and there met a frightened crowd from the next car. Others raised windows, only to realize at what speed the train was go-ing, and to know that to jump out would be death would be death.

"Get to that closet," shouted Engineer Gus Sieg to the fireman, pointing to the rear of the car, "and work the nir brakes."

But the passage was blocked with passengers, and the fireman found it impossible to make headway.
"What is going to be done?" asked Theodore Reeves, of Newark, of the engineer.

The latter made no reply, but rushed back through the fiery door-way, climbed upon the tender and disappeared in the flames. Although fauned by the wind the fire was burning more flercely than before. The engineer's cab was completely enveloped. Nearly a minute passed, and then the train came to a stop on the bridge over the Hackensack River, and the passengers knew that the engineer had put on the air brakes and reversed the engine. The train having come to a stand-still, the flames now shot upward and no longer concealed the tender. Those who stood nearest to the door saw a man's head in the water-tank on the tender. Two men rushed forward and lifted out the engineer. He had jumped into the water to extinguish the fire that was consuming him, and was found leaning, weak and only half conscious, lagainst the side of the tank. His clothes had been burned off, and his flesh was scorched on his body and legs. From both hands the flesh hung in shreds.

They dipped water in pails from the river, and put out the flames. Conductor Whelpley put Sieg on another train, and had him removed to Jersey City. Passengers who saw him were forced to tears as they praised his self-sacrifice. One of them said last evening:

Of all magnificent and brave men he is the best. We hadn't words enough to express our sense of his heroism. If he dies he will be a martyr. He saved a trainful of passengers from an apparently certain and horrible death, and if the Pennsylvania Road doesn't take care of him and his, I'll issue a call for the passengers to meet and take ac-

The train was run to Newark by The train was run to Newark by the fireman. Sieg lay in St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City, last night, in a precarious condition, but it was hoped by the physicians that he might recover. He is thirty-eight years old, and is married. John O'Dare, of Hudson street, this distributed but are last consistent. this city, said last evening:

"The engineer did not sip fact, leave his post at all. I saw the fireman come into the smoking-car. About a minute afterward the engineer came over the tender to where I was standing, on the front platform of the smoking-car. He was all on five. I heard him say something, but the only words I caught were:
'Save the passengers,' He pointed to something in the engine, which, I understood, was to control the brakes. I crept forward beneath the flames, and tried to keep what he pointed at in view, and then, in my excitement, I pulled at the bell rope. I don't know whether I did any good or not, but the train came to a standstill. Then I lifted the corn of the c the cover off the water tank, and the engineer got into the water. He stood at his post, I say, and never left it."

The accident was caused by the blowback forcing the flames out of the furnace when the door was open. The cab was badly charred, and in some places the wood was entirely burned uway.

The engine was furnished only a few days ago with a new patent valve, designed to drive the exhaust steam up through the smoke stack. The bursting of a pipe allowed the steam to rush into the furnace, and blow the fire and smoke out through the open door.-N. Y. Sun.

Swearing Off Smoking.

"My dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, rumpling his hair around over his head and gazing at himself in the glass; "my dear, do you know that I think I smoke too much? It doesn't agree with me at

"Just what I have always thought!" chimed in Mrs. Spoopendyke, "and besides it makes the room smell so. You know this room..."

"I'm not talking about the room," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, with a snort.
"I'm not aware that it affects the health of the room. I'm talking about my health this trip, and I think I'll break off short. You don't eateh me smoking any more." and Mr. Spoopen-dyke yawned and stretched himself and plumped down in his easy chair and glared out the window at the rain. "How are you going to break off?" inquired Mrs. Spoopendyke, drawing up her sewing chair and gazing into her husband's face admiringly. "I suppose the best way is not to think of it at all?"

"Certainly," cooed Mrs. Spoopen-dyke, rather nonplussed. "We might talk about the rain. I suppose this is really the equinox! How long will it last, dear?"

"Dod-gast the equinox!" sputtered Mr. Spoopendyke. "Don't you know that when a man quits smoking it depresses him? What d'ye want to talk about depressing things for? Now's the time to make me cheerful. If ye don't know any cheerful things, keep quiet."

"Of course," assented Mrs. Spoopen-"Of course," assented Mrs. Spoopen-dyke, "you want subjects that will draw your mind away from the habit of smoking like you used to. Won't it be nice when the long winter evenings come, and the lire is lighted and you have your climers and raper."

"That's just the time I want a cigar," roared Mr. Spoopendyke, bounding around in his chair and scolding his wife. "Ain't ye got sense enough to wife. "Ain't ye got sense enough to shingle your tongue for a minute? The way you're keeping it up, you'll drive me back to my habit in less 'n hour," he continued solemnly, "and then my blood be on your head?"

"Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke, "I didn't mean to. Did you notice about the comet? They say it is going to drop into the sun and burn up --"

"There ye go again!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke. "You can't open your measly mouth without suggesting some

"I'm glad you're going to stay at home to-day." continued Mrs. Spoopendyke, soothingly. "You'd be sure to catch cold if you went out; and by and hy well." and bye we'll have a piping hot dinner --"

"That's it!" squealed Mr. Spoopen-dyke, bounding out of his chair and plunging around the room. You'd got to say something about a pipe! I knew how it would be! You want me to die! You want me to smoke myself into an early grave! You'll fetch it! Don't give yourself any uneasiness! "I thought I was drawing—!"

"That's it" ripped Mr. Spoopendyke. "Drawing! You've driven me to it instead of keeping me from it. You know how it's done! All you need now is a lightning rod and a dish of milk to be an inebriate's home. Where's that eight I left here on the mantel? Gimme my death warrant! mantel? Gimme my death warrant!

"Isn't that it?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, pointing to a small pile of snull on the chair in which Mr. Spoopendyke had been sitting. "That looks like it." "Wah!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, grasping his hat and making for the door. "Another time I swear off, you go into the country, you hear!" and Mr. Spoopendyke dashed out of the house and steered for the nearest tohouse and steered for the nearest to-

"I don't care," multered Mrs.
Spoopendyke: "when he swears off again, I'm willing to leave, and in the meantime I suppose he'll be healthier without his pipe, so I'll hang it up on the wall where he'll never think of looking for it,'' and, having consigned the tobacco to the flames, Mrs. Spoopendyke gathered her sewing materials around her and doubleclinched an old resolution never to lose her temper, no matter what happened. -Brooklyn Eagle.

How a Woman Vanquished a Burglar.

Early on Tuesday morning Mrs. David Conhaim was aroused from sleep by a birglar's steatthy step. She could hear the burglar moving along on his hands and knees from the dining-room to the bedroom, and at each step something struck the floor which she believed to be either a billy or revolver. In the meantime the burglar had taken all her husband's clothing which had been left on a chair, including a gold watch and chain and sixty dollars in eash, and was stealthily making his way back toward the dining-room door, which opens into a yard. Mrs. Conhaim concluded that the time for action had arrived. She left her bod, walked to a bureau in one corner of the room wherein a loaded revolver was kept, and indoing so must have passed within a few feet of the crouching burglar. After gaining pos-session of the revolver, she entered the dining-room just as the burglar had passed out to the porch, where he was found standing on the step with most of the stolen clothing under one arm and the vest held in his right hand. This brought them within about three feet of each other. The brave lady covered the thief with the weapon and ex-

"Drop the clothes or I will fire!" The response came in the shape of a blow over the head and face with the vest held in the burglar's hand, he evidently intending to either blind her or knock her down with the weight of the heavy gold watch in the pocket. Luckily, however, the watch flew out of the pocket and, as Mrs. Conhaim threw her hand up to ward off the blow, the chain struck between her ringers, close to the watch. Instantly she closed her hand over the time-piece, gave a jerk backward, which broke the chain, whereupon the burglar, with a lierce oath, threw the vest at her face, unconscious of the fact that the sum of $60 in currency had been left undis-turbed in one of the pockets.

The burglar then started toward Eleventh street, Mrs. Conhaim firing two shots at him, without effect, probably, and following him as closely as possible. When he reached the sidewalk on the latter street he stopped an instant, threw up both hands, and dropped all the clothing on the sidewalk, Mrs. Con-nam picking them in and carrying every garment back to the house.—St. Paul Pioncer-Press.

How People Die.

Miss Nightingale has pointed out how constantly the mental state of the dying depends on their physical conditions. As a rule, she tells us, in acute cases felt. "Indifference, excepting with regard to boilily suffering, or to some duty the dying man desires to perform, is the far more usual state. But patients who die of consumption very frequently die in a state of seraphic joy and peace; the countenance almost avand peace; the countenance almost expresses rapture. Patients who die of cholera, peritonitis, etc., on the contrary, often die in a state approaching despair. In dysentery, diarrhea, or fever, the patient oftens die in a state of indifference." Those who have carefully examined the dead on a battlefield, or in the streets after an emeute, and charles with the fact that while the are struck with the fact that while the expression on the faces of those who have died by gun-shot wounds is one of agony and distress, the dead by sword have a calmer expression, though their wounds often seem more painful to the eye. A very careful observer, who was through the Indian Mutiny, entirely confirms this. After giving several instances, he says: "A rapid death by steel is almost painless. Saber edge or point divides the nerves so quickly as to give little pain. A bullet lacerates."--London Speciator.

—It is said that the whip is never used for horses on Governor Stanford's stock farm at Palo Alto, Cal., and not only is this forbidden, but an angry word by any of the men is followed by instant dismissal. There are on this farm 537 head of horses, nearly all yearlings and

FOUND DEAD.

The Body of H. G. Roberts Found Dead in the Williams Block,

The Fludings o the Coroner's Inquest field Yesterday Afternoon. Considerable excitement was created in the neighborhood of the Williams block, on East Milwaukee street, yesterday afternoon, upon the report being circulated that Mr. H. G. Roberts, familiarly called "Posey Roberts," had been found dead in his room in that block; and that his body had been terribly mulilated by the rats. The rooms occupied by the the hallway, and in front, and were used besides living and sleeping purposes, in the propigation of house plants and flowers, he devoting his entire time to that business. He was in the habit of going away from the city and remaining three or four days at a time, consequently the families residing in the building took no notice of his absence. Yesterday afternoon between two and three o'clock, Mr. William Funk, who occupies rooms on the lower floors of the same building, went to Roberts' rooms for the purpose of a friendly cell and visit. Upon arriving at the room he found the door partly open, and looking in he saw Mr. Roberts lying on the floor, as he thought asleep; he went into the room, and upon looking into his face he was horror stricken at the sight, and hastened to the room below and mformed Mr. H. F. Hagerman. These and then informed Marshal Hogar. Justice of the Peace M. S. Prichard being informed by the marshal, a coroner's jury was summoned, composed of the following gentlemen,-Messra, J. W. Bates, H. L. Skavlem, R. W. Burton, John Brown Thomas Hogan, and W.B. Cushman, and after viewing the remains in the room, the jury and witnesses repaired to the office of Dr. Henry Palmer, when the inquest was held.

THE EVIDENCE.

William Funk, being duly sworn, said,—I have known Mr. Roberts for two or three months, ever since he moved into the block; have not seen him for a week: I went up to see if he was there to-day; I last saw him room in the block on the second floor; Roberts was in rooms on the fifth story; went up this afternoon about two o'clook and found his door partly open and some snow, or tracks by the door; I looked in and saw thim lying the floor and thought he was asleep; he was in the same position as when the jury saw him; I went in and saw that he was dead, and called Mr. Hagerman; we went into the room together; I had not been up to Roberts' room before for nearly two weeks; I did not look at the door fastenings; when I saw that he was dead, I went and called Mr. Hagerman; the door had been broken open; Mr. Nicholson had been inquiring for him; he was living alone; there was some snow by the door; some one had been there before I was; the last time I was there was about two weeks seemed to have plenty of food; he boarded himself, doing his own cooking in his rooms: I saw no snow or tracks in the room; I thought by the snow tracks at the door that some one had broken into his room and killed him last night. Mr. H. F. Hagerman being next duly sworn, testified: I knew H. G. Roberts in his life time; have known him about three months, from the time he moved into the Williams block; he occupied four rooms in the fifth story of that block; the room where he was found was his sleeping room; I saw him last alive over a week ago; he was in his room more or less all the time when at home, but often went away to Chicago and Milwankee for two or three days at a time; Mr. Funk came to my room, and told me that Roberts lay upon the floor dead, and I went up with him; I was in the room when the jury was sworn; the body was in the same position then as when I first saw it; my room is right under his on the next iloor below; a week ago last night, about three or four o'clock, I heard a noise in his room, which awoke me; I heard a terrible noise, and thought the man meting that noise was sick, and I told my wife; the noise seemed like a person shaking a stove, and continued for a long time; in about an hour I went to sleep; the noise sounded like a man running and kicking about the floor, in about the same place as where he was found, judging by the sound; my wife wanted me to go up and see what was the trouble, but I did not did not think anything about it in the morning, and went to my work; the noise did not sound like a struggle between two parties, the noise was continuous, as if in pains; I said, through mistake, that I went to work the next morning-it was Sunday. I saw him most every day; he often came, into my rooms; he had no valuables or money that I know of; he had two stoves and purchased his coal by the basket; he did not seem to have any valuables or money: he came to my rooms very often to see what time it was; I done some work for him and took a fancy horse shoe for pay; I was up at one go up; a young gentlemen, a printer J. H. Nicholson, bis nophew) was up here the last of the week and knocked at the door; he (Roberts) called him his noise in the room to Mr. Funk; we are not in the habit of meeting: I am here | buried. every night; I have been at home al! the week except one day; Roberts was in good health; he was not a drinking man, and had said so to my wife; I was not intimately acquainted with Roberts; saw him since he moved into the block; there is an entrance at each floor at the back stairs; I should not be able to hear any one entering from the back stairs; I did not notice any snow at the door; on Wednesday Mrs. Millie Clark and my wife went up to see Roberts about some flowers, and then Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Daly; they knecked at the door, it was closed; do not know if it was locked.

Dr. Henry Palmer being duly sworn testified in substance as follows: I have known H. G. Roberts for ten or twelve years; I have treated him professionally; some two years ago was the last time I prescribed for him; at that time he was suffering from epilepsy, and had occasional attacks; I do not know how long; he told me some years; some times he would be free and then the attacks would be more frequent; I have no personal knowledge of his condition since then; I examined his body to-day, I found the body on the floor where the jury found it; the body extended, face deceased were on the fifth floor, west of down; the body gave evidence that death occurred some days previous; the marks of violence upon him seem to have been produced by rats; the rats had enten off a portion of one ear, a portion of the eye, and a small portion of the nose; the spots of discoloration on the forchead and different parts of the face, I think attributable to the freezing and thawing of the same; there seemed to be no marks of violence on the body except what might be produced by falling; I should judge that death was caused by an opileptic or an apoplectic condition, or a condition in which there was unconsciousness from which he did not recover; that condition might be attributable to the condition of the weather, the body being destitute of clothing except an under shirt and and an overshirt; both the stoyes had been filled but had not been lighted; the surroundings indicated that he had rein a cold room, and tired got up afterward and fell where he was found; there was some blood on the floor under his bead; I attribute this to his condition after death; he had two or three apoplectic fits a month, and again he would go some time without Laving any Dr. S. S. Judd, being sworn, testified that he had been acquainted with the deceased ten or twelve years, and had prescribed for him for epilepsy within the last two years; within a year he called upon me, and stated that he had two or three attacks a week, then he would be free from it for three or four weeks; I never saw him under the influence of one of these attacks; I was called once, but he recovered before I reached him; the condition I found him in was the same as indicated by Dr. Palmer, and I could but reiterate what he has said. the deceased had fallen on his face, on his left side, his hands under him; that he had fallen in one of these attacks; and that there were no signs of violence-John W. Allen testified that he went to Roberts' rooms on Tuesday aftern oon, at the request of Mrs. Spence, to procure flowers for the funeral of the late S. C Wood; that he found the door locked; he soon after started to go again, but seeing no light, he did not go up.

Mr. Funk again stated that he was almost sure that it was Monday or Tuesday last that he saw Roberts on Bluff street, with a basket of flowers, yet be would not be positive,-but it was a cold

Dr. Palmer further stated that the body indicated that it had been dead from five to seven days.

Thereupon the july rendered the following verdict:

An inquisition taken at the city of Janesville, in the county of Rock, in the state of Wisconsin, on the 17th day of December, A. D., 1882, before M. S. Prici ard, one of the justices of the peace of said county, upon the view of the body of H. G. The body was taken in charge by Marshal Hogan, who turned it over to Messra. Britton & Kimball, undertakers, and further proceedings with the build were deferred until the arrival of Mr. J. H. Nich.

olson, who was in Monroe. The deceased came to this city about twelve years ago, and as stated before had devoted his time to raising and selling house plants and flowers. He occupied rooms for some years in the Myers block, but some mouths ago removed to the upper story of the Williams block, go; I did not see him alive after that; I | where he had a suite of very comfortable rooms, and lived there entirely alone. The supposition is that he fell in an epilepic fit last Sunday morning, and died from exposure. The relatives of the deceased, (his mother, step-father, and a sister) reside in Rockford, and were informed of the sad occu-ence by telegraph this morning. They are expected here this afternoon, when the remains will be taken to Rockford for burial.

This morning Dr. C. L. Marin and Mr Wm. Ruger caused the remains to be properly cared for and placed in a coffinready to be received by the parents of three o'clock this morning, and heard no the deceased inpon their arrival anithas city from Rockford. P. S.-Mr. Charles A. Roberts, brother of the deceased, and Mr. F. Champ, his stepfather, arrived from Rockford at three boy; I had not mentioned hearing the o'clock this afternoon, and will remove the body to Rockford, where it will be

THE REAPER DEATH.

No Performance of La Belle Russe The Sudden Death of Victor Jouan. neault-Leonard House Among those who are Gane.

The death of Victor Jonanneault was bardly unexpected although it was sudden. He was nearing four score years and was feeble, and after closing out his business went so the Pember house, where he had a room. He was around until last evening in his usual degree of health, but this morning died sudden from a stroke of apoplexy. Victor Jouanneault has had a remarkable career. He was born in France on the 3d of June, 1908. When only 19 he was graduated from the university of a settlement for partial damages, Mr. France, with the expectation of joining the priesthood. Soon after his graduation he became a tutor in the family of Jeffrys Lewis company. the king of Belgium, where he remained three years. Afterward he entered Stoneyhaust college, England, as professor of the French language. While in this institution he taught Morris O'Connell. son of the celebrated Trish orator and agita. tor, Daniel O'Connell. Thence he went to Ireland and became professor of modem languages in the Tuam college, where he remained but a short time. About 1840 he came to the United States, and was ordained a priest at New Orleans and was afterwards transferred to the Wisconsin diocese, and settled at Mrneral Point. Father McGiunity, of St. Patrick's church, of this city, was a small boy in that parish when Jouanneault was in charge of a Catholic church at that place. Some difficulty arose in the church which led Jou. anneault to quit the priesthood, and from Mineral Point he went to Nanvoo, then the head-center of Mormonism, and taught in the family of Brigham Young, and remained there three years. In 1849 he came to Janesville, and opened a small dry goods and clothing store, about where Denniston's store is now located, and afterwards moved to the Young America block, where he established a book and stationery store. In 1870 he built the block which had been occupied by him until recently, at a cost of $6,500. While in that location he kept a toy and fancy goods stock. His nearest relative known is Victor Barbour, a nephew, who lives in Chicago. His will was made out some time ago, which provides that $500 shall be devoted to paying his funeral expenses, and erecting a monument, and $1,500 is bequeathed to Mrs. Thomas Leech, of this city, who had done many kind services for Mr. Jonanneault during the time he was in feeble health. The rest of his property goes to his nephew.

The funeral services will take place tomorrow afternoon, at two o'clock, at the Pember house.

DEONARD HOUSE. Mr. Leonard House, another old resideut and highly respected citizen of Japesville, passed away yesterday. Ho had been in feeble health for some time, but had not been confined to his bed more than a week or ten days. He was a stone mason by trade, having followed that business in this city for more than twenty-five years. He leaves a wife, and also one son, the latter living in Minnesota. He was an honored member of the Masonic and Odd Fellow frateraities, and of the Grand Army of the Republic, and at his special request, the members of Odd Fellows' Lodge No. 14, will take charge of the funeral. -

The faneral will be held on Wednes day aftereoon, at two o'clock, from the house. Mr. House was a member of the third Wisconsin cavalry, generally known as the "Barstow regiment," and was commissioned 2d lieutenant in December, 1861, and was promoted to 1st lieutenant, which position he resigned in December, 1862. In February, 1865, he was commissioned captam in the 44th regiment and was mustered out of the service with his regiment in August, 1865.

THE LARGEST and fluest assortment of Hair goods ever brought to Janesville, can be seen at Mrs. William Saddlers Opera house block

formances. There was a general disappointment on Saturday night when the people went to Myers opers house to find the house dark and the door locked. The cause of this was the failure to have the opera house properly warmed. By some mismanagement sufficient steam could not be made to give the house the necessary heat, and as a matter of course no performance could take place. The responsibility of this mishap rested upon the proprietor of the opera house, and in

Myers drow his check for $100 and gave

NO SUNDAY THEATERS

Saturday Night-The Action of Mayor Croft in regard to Sunday Per-decided to give a performance Lappin's music hall on Sunday night, and made a public announcement to that effect. This struck the people of Janesville with a good deal of astonishment, as not any of the halls in this city had ever been used for theatrical performances on Sunday, and in the forencen there were all sorts of speculations as to what would be the outcome of the matter. But Mayor Croft and Marshal Hogen were not slow to take that action which would meet with the approbation of a large majority of the citizens of Janesville. When the mayor heard of the programme he quickly decided to hi own mind that there would be no per. formance last night. He quietly went to work about the business, held a conversation with the management, stated his position firmly but good naturedly, and representing the popular sentiment of the community, gave the manager of the company to understand that if a performance was attempted he would cause the arrest of every one connected with the affair. When the matter was represented in the strong light in which Mayor. Croft put it, Mr. Goodwin wisely came to the conclusion that it was best for al concerned not to put La Belle Russe on the stage in Janesville on Sunday night.

The action of the authorities in this matter will be endorsed by a large portion of the community. The time has not yet come, and ought never to come, when theatrical performances will be permitted on the stage in Janeaville on Sun-CHICAGO MARKETS.
